

William Blair Growth Fund Fund Manager Commentary

Market Overview

COVID-19 was the dominant force affecting the economy and equities in a volatile year-to-date period.

Late in the first quarter, as it became clear that COVID-19 was becoming a global pandemic, equities declined rapidly due to stay-at-home directives, which effectively shut down many segments of the economy. After bottoming in mid-March, equity returns were robust during the second quarter. This was predominately the result of massive amounts of fiscal and monetary stimulus, coupled with improving COVID-19 trends, optimism regarding vaccine development and progress toward re-opening the economy. The Federal Reserve (Fed) responded quickly and dramatically in an attempt to limit economic damage.

Third quarter advances built on second quarter strength. Continued economic improvement, including positive trends in employment and increases in consumer spending, coupled with incremental progress towards the development of a vaccine, supported the market rise. Market returns were further fueled by a shift in Fed policy to allow flexibility around its inflation target, signaling policymakers' intent to keep the Fed Funds rate low for an extended period. Within the market, there was a pronounced bifurcation between the performance of "COVID beneficiaries" and those disrupted by COVID, as select companies across different sectors saw a strengthening of demand for their products (e.g., ecommerce), while others saw a complete collapse in demand (e.g., travel related), though this divergence began to narrow late in the third quarter.

Amid significant COVID-related business disruption, a focus on 2021 profit potential and a decline in 10-year U.S. Treasury yields allowed valuation multiple expansion to drive many U.S. equity indices in positive territory for the year-to-date period ended September 30, 2020.

Fund Performance

The William Blair Growth Fund (Class N shares) trailed its benchmark during the third quarter, primarily driven by stock specific dynamics. The largest source of underperformance as compared to our benchmark came from not owning Apple (Information Technology) and Tesla (Consumer Discretionary). Both stocks have benefited from significant valuation multiple expansion, as fundamental expectations have remained relatively stable. In the case of Apple, given the maturity of the high-end smart phone, tablet and PC markets, and the recent revaluation of its services business, we believe the long-term growth and return prospects for our other Information Technology holdings are more attractive. As it relates to Tesla, we believe the stock is embedding unrealistic expectations as to the pace of auto market conversion to electronic vehicles, as Pure Storage, a provider of flash-based storage solutions, and National Instruments, a designer and manufacturer of tools utilized in the testing of electrical products, both experienced COVID-19 related demand headwinds. Conversely, top contributors in the quarter included BigCommerce (Information Technology), Horizon Therapeutics (Health Care), Advanced Micro Devices (Information Technology), Copart (Industrials) and Bright Horizons (Consumer Discretionary). Shares of Horizon Therapeutics advanced on strong performance of Tepezza, a recently launched drug that treats Thyroid Eye Disease, and management's significant increase in peak sales guidance for the drug. Fabless semiconductor company Advanced Micro Devices benefited from robust growth in server CPU sales and continued high demand for laptops.

Outlook

Looking forward, though the U.S. economy is recovering and broad market indices are near prior peak levels, uncertainty remains. The upcoming U.S. presidential election is likely to cause volatility to the extent its outcome is not immediately known and as the market digests its implications. Should there be a change in leadership, the market will have to weigh likely changes in tax policy and regulation against the potential for higher levels of fiscal stimulus.

In addition, virus trends heading into colder months are a source of concern for consumers and businesses most impacted by COVID-19 at the same time the benefits of earlier federal aid packages are fading and job growth is slowing. Progress toward the development and rollout of a vaccine and the Fed's commitment to remain accommodative are critical factors in supporting a continued recovery.

Our investment philosophy is built on the belief that future cash flows are the ultimate determinants of long-term value creation and stock performance. We remain focused on identifying companies with superior management, high barriers to entry, differentiated products or services, and the financial flexibility to invest through uncertainty. We seek to construct a portfolio of companies that we believe will emerge from the current period stronger regardless of political outcomes or the duration of the economic recovery.

IMPORTANT DISCLOSURES

The Fund's returns will vary, and you could lose money by investing in the Fund. The Fund invests most of its assets in equity securities of domestic growth companies where the primary risk is that the value of the equity securities it holds might decrease in response to the activities of those companies or market and economic conditions. Individual securities may not perform as expected or a fund used by the Adviser may fail to produce its intended result. The securities of smaller and medium sized companies tend to be more volatile and less liquid than securities of larger companies. In addition, small and medium sized companies may be traded in lower volumes. This can increase volatility and increase the liquidity risk whereby the Fund will not be able to sell the security on short notice at a reasonable price. The Fund is not intended to be a complete investment program. The Fund is designed for long-term investors.

The Russell 3000 Growth Index consists of large, medium and small-capitalization companies with above average price-to-book ratios and forecasted growth rates. The stocks in this index are also members of either the Russell 1000 Growth or the Russell 2000 Growth indices. The size of companies in the Russell 3000 Growth Index may change with market conditions. The Index is unmanaged, does not incur fees or expenses, and cannot be invested in directly.
