Second Quarter 2021

William Blair Large Cap Growth Fund
Fund Manager Commentary

Market Overview

The U.S. equity market remained strong through the first half of 2021 as the U.S. economy continued to demonstrate improvement following disruption in 2020. First quarter market performance was supported by positive economic data, robust job growth and massive stimulus distributed to U.S. households and businesses. Improvements in corporate earnings growth also buoyed equities as corporations reported fourth quarter profits that broadly exceeded Wall Street's expectations.

While the rate of vaccinations accelerated faster than anticipated across the country during the first quarter, the pace of vaccinations slowed through the second quarter despite an abundant supply of vaccines in the U.S. However, new cases of COVID-19, along with hospitalizations and deaths, significantly declined through the first half of the year, allowing the economy to recover as restrictions were eased across the country.

In the second quarter, manufacturing activity, gross domestic product (GDP), and job growth increased, further supporting the continued economic rebound. Notably, as U.S. employers increased hiring, the number of job openings outpaced the number of potential workers available to claim them, resulting in a sharp increase in wages. While the source of funding is yet to be determined, President Biden reached a bipartisan deal to boost infrastructure spending by $600 billion late in the second quarter. The Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) reiterated its commitment to maintain a low target federal funds rate as the economy continues to recover. However, Fed policymakers announced that they expect an increase in the fed funds rate by the end of 2023, an accelerated timeline relative to prior expectations. U.S. Treasury yields declined during the second quarter, facilitating a rotation that benefited growth-oriented segments of the market. With a largely positive fundamental backdrop and healthy corporate earnings reports, U.S. equity indices advanced in the second quarter.

Fund Performance

The William Blair Large Cap Growth Fund (Class N shares) relative performance drivers in the second quarter were primarily stock-specific. Top contributors to portfolio performance were Apollo Global Management (Financials) and Intuit (Information Technology). Global alternatives investment manager Apollo outperformed on strong results and better investor understanding of its agreement to purchase the remaining interest it did not already own in Athene, a life insurance company. Intuit, a provider of software for tax preparation, personal finance and small business management, outperformed on margin expansion potential and a favorable outlook for multiple segments of the business. Other standout performers included Equifax (Industrials), PayPal (Information Technology) and Adobe (Information Technology). In addition, relative performance benefited from our decision, which was largely informed by our valuation discipline, to not own Tesla (Consumer Discretionary). Our top detractors during the period included Marriott (Consumer Discretionary), NVIDIA (Information Technology), Mastercard (Information Technology), Fortive (Industrials) and Texas Instruments (Information Technology). Shares of Marriott, a leading global operator and franchisor of hotel, residential and timeshare properties, lagged on continued COVID-19 related disruption for the global travel industry. Fabless semiconductor company NVIDIA reported strong results and forward-looking guidance, benefiting from robust demand in gaming and datacenter. We initiated a position in the stock mid-quarter; thus, our underweight exposure to this strong performer resulted in a headwind to relative performance.

Outlook

Despite strong equity market performance and a continued sense of optimism around U.S. economic potential, some uncertainty remains surrounding the spread of new COVID-19 variants that have the potential to slow down the reopening of the economy. More specifically, the spread of the COVID-19 Delta variant coupled with vaccine hesitancy among some portions of the population may pose a challenge to the U.S.

achieving herd immunity. While bolstering the economy, the surge in government spending and recovery in consumer spending activity has fueled inflation concerns among some investors, though the bond market does not appear to share those concerns, at least for the time being.

We continue to monitor economic developments and navigate through the business model implications of COVID-19 disruption and the subsequent economic recovery. Our focus remains on identifying companies with long-term durability, independent of the economic backdrop, whose stocks present compelling risk/reward opportunities. Through bottom-up, fundamental analysis, we seek to identify quality companies with superior management, high barriers to entry and differentiated products or services that we believe can outperform over a market cycle.
