

William Blair Small-Mid Cap Growth Fund Fund Manager Commentary

Market Overview

In a volatile first quarter, U.S. equity indices declined as the Omicron wave, inflation concerns, and the invasion of Ukraine weighed on equity valuations. Entering the year, the U.S. was experiencing a surge in COVID-19 cases as the Omicron variant spread quickly, resulting in renewed disruptions for certain businesses. Elevated inflation drove expectations for faster monetary tightening by the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) and corresponded with a rise in 10-year U.S. Treasury bond yields and U.S. mortgage rates. During March, the FOMC increased the target federal funds rate by 25 basis points for the first increase in this cycle, with expectations for multiple increases throughout 2022 and 2023. The Russian invasion of Ukraine intensified inflationary pressures and supply chain concerns, given Russia's role as a major energy and commodity producer, and contributed to higher oil and gas prices. With higher inflation and an increase in expectations for the pace of Fed rate hikes, equity valuations were pressured while U.S. corporate earnings remained solid.

Fund Performance

The William Blair Small-Mid Cap Growth Fund (Class N shares) outperformed the -12.30% return of the Russell 2500 Growth benchmark during the first quarter, driven largely by stock specific dynamics. Top contributors included Virtu Financial (Financials), Crown Holdings (Materials), SolarEdge Technologies (Information Technology), Cameco Corp (Energy) and New Fortress Energy (Energy). Virtu Financial, an electronic market maker and liquidity provider, benefited from higher volatility and trading volumes. Shares of solar inverter manufacturer, SolarEdge, advanced on strong demand for its products. From a style standpoint, our typical underweight to companies without earnings was a modest tailwind. Among companies with earnings, there was minimal performance differentiation on quality factors and therefore our bias toward higher quality companies did not provide its typical down-market benefit. Top detractors during the quarter were Trex Company (Industrials), Burlington Stores (Consumer Discretionary), Fox Factory (Consumer Discretionary), Builders FirstSource (Industrials) and Coupa Software (Information Technology). Shares of Trex, the industry leader in composite residential decking, were pressured by higher-than-expected sales and marketing expense forecasts and concerns that higher interest rates could dampen demand. Off-price retailer Burlington Stores experienced traffic and inventory headwinds.

Outlook

Amid tightening financial conditions and significant geopolitical tension, we anticipate greater focus on the potential for slowing economic growth. Relatedly, near the end of the first quarter, 2-year and 10-year U.S. Treasury yields inverted briefly. From a demand standpoint, the outlook for consumer spending is opaque given the opposing dynamics of inflationary pressures weighing on real income versus pent-up demand for services and experiences post-Omicron and a positive employment backdrop. Supply chain disruptions are likely to continue, exacerbated by conflict in eastern Europe as well as China's zero COVID policy closing major manufacturing centers throughout the country, further clouding visibility as to the U.S. economic trajectory in the near to intermediate term.

With this backdrop, we believe it is increasingly likely that investors will differentiate among stocks on the basis of quality attributes, such as the durability of earnings and margins. Further, given the valuation-driven sell off in the first quarter, more attractive valuations in certain areas have presented opportunities. We believe our philosophy of identifying durable businesses whose stocks present attractive risk/reward opportunities should serve us well in a variety of economic environments, as it has historically.

IMPORTANT DISCLOSURES

The Fund's returns will vary, and you could lose money by investing in the Fund. The Fund invests most of its assets in equity securities of small cap and mid cap domestic growth companies where the primary risk is that the value of the equity securities it holds might decrease in response to the activities of those companies or market and economic conditions. Individual securities may not perform as expected or a fund used by the Adviser may fail to produce its intended result. Investing in small and medium capitalization companies involves special risks, including higher volatility and lower liquidity. Small and mid-cap stocks are also more sensitive to purchase/sale transactions and changes in the issuer's financial condition. Convertible securities may be called before intended, which may have an adverse effect on investment objectives. Diversification does not ensure against loss. The Fund is not intended to be a complete investment program. The Fund is designed for long-term investors.

The Russell 2500 Growth Index measures the performance of those Russell 2500 companies with above average price-to-book ratios and forecasted growth rates. The Index is unmanaged, does not incur fees or expenses, and cannot be invested in directly.
