

William Blair Growth Fund Fund Manager Commentary

Market Overview

In a volatile first quarter, U.S. equity indices declined as the Omicron wave, inflation concerns, and the invasion of Ukraine weighed on equity valuations. Entering the year, the U.S. was experiencing a surge in COVID-19 cases as the Omicron variant spread quickly, resulting in renewed disruptions for certain businesses. Elevated inflation drove expectations for faster monetary tightening by the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) and corresponded with a rise in 10-year U.S. Treasury bond yields and U.S. mortgage rates. During March, the FOMC increased the target federal funds rate by 25 basis points for the first increase in this cycle, with expectations for multiple increases throughout 2022 and 2023. The Russian invasion of Ukraine intensified inflationary pressures and supply chain concerns, given Russia's role as a major energy and commodity producer, and contributed to higher oil and gas prices. With higher inflation and an increase in expectations for the pace of Fed rate hikes, equity valuations were pressured while U.S. corporate earnings remained solid.

Fund Performance

The William Blair Growth Fund (Class N shares) outperformed its benchmark in the first quarter, primarily driven by stock-specific dynamics. Our top individual contributors included New Fortress Energy (Energy), Cameco Corp (Energy), UnitedHealth (Health Care) and Pure Storage (Information Technology). New Fortress, a company that develops, finances and constructs liquified natural gas (LNG) assets and related infrastructure, announced a number of project milestones. Cameco, a company focused on the mining, trading and processing of uranium, reported strong momentum in new contract activity as the fundamental backdrop continues to improve. Stock selection in Communication Services, including our position in Zynga and not owning Meta Platforms, also contributed positively returns. Shares of Meta Platforms lagged due to slowing advertising revenue growth; thus, not owning this laggard resulted in a tailwind to relative performance. Conversely, our top individual detractors included PayPal Holdings (Information Technology), Burlington Stores (Consumer Discretionary), Grid Dynamics (Information Technology), Advanced Micro Devices (Information Technology) and Rush Street Interactive (Consumer Discretionary), as well as not owning Apple (Information Technology). Shares of digital payments company PayPal declined as the company communicated forward looking revenue guidance below expectations, driven in part by continued e-commerce spending headwinds. Burlington Stores, the third largest U.S. off-price retailer, experienced a slowdown in traffic related to a challenged inventory position. Stock selection in Industrials also detracted from relative returns. From a style perspective, our emphasis on longer duration

Outlook

Amid tightening financial conditions and significant geopolitical tension, we anticipate greater focus on the potential for slowing economic growth. Relatedly, near the end of the first quarter, 2-year and 10-year U.S. Treasury yields inverted briefly. From a demand standpoint, the outlook for consumer spending is opaque given the opposing dynamics of inflationary pressures weighing on real income versus pent-up demand for services and experiences post-Omicron and a positive employment backdrop. Supply chain disruptions are likely to continue, exacerbated by conflict in eastern Europe as well as China's zero COVID policy closing major manufacturing centers throughout the country, further clouding visibility as to the U.S. economic trajectory in the near to intermediate term.

With this backdrop, we believe it is increasingly likely that investors will differentiate among stocks on the basis of quality attributes, such as the durability of earnings and margins. Further, given the valuation-driven sell off in the first quarter, more attractive valuations in certain areas have presented

IMPORTANT DISCLOSURES

The Fund's returns will vary, and you could lose money by investing in the Fund. The Fund invests most of its assets in equity securities of domestic growth companies where the primary risk is that the value of the equity securities it holds might decrease in response to the activities of those companies or market and economic conditions. Individual securities may not perform as expected or a fund used by the Adviser may fail to produce its intended result. The securities of smaller and medium sized companies tend to be more volatile and less liquid than securities of larger companies. In addition, small and medium sized companies may be traded in lower volumes. This can increase volatility and increase the liquidity risk whereby the Fund will not be able to sell the security on short notice at a reasonable price. The Fund is not intended to be a complete investment program. The Fund is designed for long-term investors.

The Russell 3000 Growth Index consists of large, medium and small-capitalization companies with above average price-to-book ratios and forecasted growth rates. The stocks in this index are also members of either the Russell 1000 Growth or the Russell 2000 Growth indices. The size of companies in the Russell 3000 Growth Index may change with market conditions. The Index is unmanaged, does not incur fees or expenses, and cannot be invested in directly.
