

William Blair Small Cap Growth Fund Fund Manager Commentary

Market Overview

The U.S. equity market showed resilience throughout the first half of 2023, reflected in the positive performance across U.S. equity indices, albeit with a wide range of performance across style and size dimensions. Despite investors' concerns regarding regional bank failures and higher interest rates, positive developments such as robust jobs growth and moderating inflation provided a strong counterbalance for the market.

During the first quarter, moderating inflation and strong employment data provided optimism for a soft landing. The Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) increased the target Federal Funds Rate by 25 basis points in both February and March. In March, the market experienced a decline due to the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank and concerns surrounding smaller banks. This led to a rally in U.S. Government bonds as investors questioned the stability of smaller banks and anticipated a potential pause in Federal Reserve (Fed) tightening. Despite these challenges, the job market remained resilient, with notable employment gains in leisure, hospitality, retail trade, and healthcare, somewhat offset by employment declines in information technology.

U.S. equities continued their advance in the second quarter as the likelihood of further bank failures appeared to diminish and the economy displayed modest growth. The revised Q1 Gross Domestic Product (GDP) figures revealed a year-over-year expansion of 2.0%, surpassing the previous estimate of 1.3% growth. In May, the Consumer Price Index (CPI) showed a year-over-year increase of +4.0%, underscoring ongoing inflationary pressures, albeit coming in lower than the multi-decade peak of +9.1% reported in June of 2022. The FOMC raised interest rates by 25 basis points in May, bringing the Federal Funds Rate to a target range of 5.00%-5.25%, the highest level since August 2007.

Fund Performance

The William Blair Small Cap Growth Fund (Class N shares) underperformed its benchmark, the Russell 2000 Growth index, during the second quarter. During the quarter, the portfolio underperformed the Russell 2000 Growth Index driven by stock specific dynamics. Our top detractors included Mercury Systems (Industrials), QuinStreet (Communication Services), Certara (Health Care), Ducommun (Industrials) and Luxfer Holdings (Industrials). Shares of Mercury Systems, a provider of sensor processing subsystems, declined on near term profit pressures amidst manufacturing and supply chain challenges. QuinStreet, a provider of performance-based marketing and lead generation services, gave a cautious outlook for its insurance vertical as carriers are pausing advertising spend to assess market conditions. Stock selection in Information Technology and Industrials, in addition to our underweight to Biotechnology, also detracted from relative returns. On the other hand, our top contributors included Builders FirstSource (Industrials), Vita Coco (Consumer Staples), Inspire Medical (Health Care), ACV Auctions (Industrials) and Overstock.com (Consumer Discretionary). Builders FirstSource, a materials manufacturer and distributor for home builders, reported better than expected first quarter earnings results driven by higher-than-anticipated revenue from value-add products and associated margins. Vita Coco, a supplier and distributor of coconut water, reported first quarter earnings results ahead of expectations driven by strong volume growth and margin expansion. Stock specific contributors and detractors for the second quarter are discussed in greater detail at the end of this quarterly review.

Outlook

As we enter the second half of the year, there is potential for the Fed's rate-hiking cycle to exert a slowing effect on economic growth. While the pace of inflation has moderated, it remains above the Fed's target level, indicating the possibility of additional interest rate increases. Although the full impact of rate increases over the past 18 months has yet to be felt, there are already noticeable effects as lending conditions tighten for businesses, consumers, and real estate developers. Despite these potential headwinds, the current backdrop of a slowly expanding economy, robust consumer spending on areas such as travel and leisure, and new job growth offers support for equity investors.

Looking ahead, companies with strong balance sheets, durable business models, sustainable cash flow, and the ability to self-fund growth are likely to be uniquely positioned as the economic landscape unfolds. We believe our philosophy of identifying durable businesses whose stocks present attractive risk/reward opportunities should serve us well in a variety of economic environments, as it has historically.

IMPORTANT DISCLOSURES

The Fund's returns will vary, and you could lose money by investing in the Fund. The Fund invests most of its assets in equity securities of small cap domestic growth companies where the primary risk is that the value of the equity securities it holds might decrease in response to the activities of those companies or market and economic conditions. Individual securities may not perform as expected or a fund used by the Adviser may fail to produce its intended result. Investing in smaller companies involves special risks, including higher volatility and lower liquidity. Small cap stocks are also more sensitive to purchase/sale transactions and changes in the issuer's financial condition. These risks are intensified for investments in micro-cap companies. Individual securities may not perform as expected or a fund used by the Adviser may fail to produce its intended result. Convertible securities may be called before intended, which may have an adverse effect on investment objectives. The Fund is not intended to be a complete investment program. The Fund is designed for long-term investors.

The Russell 2000 Growth Index is the Fund's primary benchmark and consists of small-capitalization companies with above average price-to-book ratios and forecasted growth rates. The Index is unmanaged, does not incur fees or expenses, and cannot be invested in directly.
